

The 10th annual
LILLY COLLOQUIUM
TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 19
11:00 AM

Omwake-Dearborn Chapel – Catawba College

COMMUNITY FORUM 7:30 PM

Tom Smith Auditorium of Ketner Hall – Catawba College

FREE & OPEN TO THE PUBLIC.

SALVATION

a Story of Survival

"The gripping new novel by the author of Someone to Kill"

KURT CORRIHER

Keynote Speaker is Catawba professor, author and actor

Dr. Kurt Corriher

He will emphasize the importance of examining the artistic dimension of our lives.

Corriher will continue a tradition of previous colloquium speakers – that of helping students and other members of the community discern their vocational direction and calling in order to pursue work that will be found to be meaningful and fulfilling. He will approach this discernment with a special emphasis on the way that artistic expression through writing, acting, music and visual arts provides opportunities for this fulfillment and the realization of one's goals, simultaneous with 'making a living'.

During his more than 20 years of service to Catawba, Corriher has served in a number of capacities including director of the Ketner Center for International Studies, theater arts professor, German professor, and project director of the Lilly Center. A Fulbright Fellow, he currently serves Catawba as a professor of theatre arts. An accomplished actor, he often is featured in productions of the St. Thomas and Piedmont Players, and also directs plays for the St. Thomas Players and Catawba College. He is the author of a number of books & plays including his most recent novel, "Salvation: A Story of Survival."

Previous colloquium speakers include, among others, educator Sharon Daloz Parks, theologian Martin Marty, former professional football player Joe Ehrman and columnist Leonard Pitts. The Lilly Colloquium at Catawba was established through the funding provided by the Lilly Endowment and Catawba's Lilly Center for Vocation and Values.